FARMERS' MEETING.

Large Attendance Yesterday at County Committee's Session

TEREE-YEAR PLEDGES

Loose Tobacco Can Be Delivered to Imperial Tobacco Company

The tobacco raiser was much in evidence yesterday. They were here from all parts of the county and are highly enthusiastic over the outlook for the year 1906.

The meeting was called to order by County Chairman W. W. Radford, who, while he spoke of some discouragements that have to be met by the association, spoke encouragingly of the future of the organization. He impressed upon the members, who filled nearly every seat in the circuit court room, the absolute need of loyalty to the association, and their duty to use their influence to get every tobacco grower to unite with them in the fight that is before them, though the victory has already been won.

He said that the association has established a market in Europe that cannot be taken from it. They like the way the association's prizes, put up and assort the tobacco better than anything they have ever had before, and they want more of it. Farmers may prize their own tobacco if they prefer it, but he is positive the weed will bring at least a dollar more money if they will turn it over to the prizees contracted with by the committee for this county.

He said that the association now has tobacco pledged to control the market and higher prices will be obtained for the next crop.

One of the main points brought out by Chairman Radford was that the members have the right to sell their tobacco loose and deliver it to the Imperial Tobacco Company in this city. When a member wants to sell his tobacco loose all he has to do is notify Chairman Radford and he will furnish a man to go with the representative of the Imperial and they will go to the farmer's barn and agree as to price. The trade is closed and delivery is in order.

As to lugs, Mr. Radford says the Association has a positive contract for every pound of lugs that the members may raise, and at prices that will be far in advance of anything they have received for lugs for a long time.

Dr. D. A. Amoss, of Caldwell county, was present, and at the request of Mr. Radford addressed the meeting. Mr. Amoss gave a brief history of the Association in his county. Its discouragements are due to rivalry in Caldwell to the fact the enemies are persistent in their efforts to break up the organization and circulate all kinds of stories for the purpose. He has been working for twelve months and is determined to fight to the finish.

Pledges were asked for the 1906 crop, and it was made known that the pledge was to be for three years. It was expected that every farmer in the room would pledge himself, but our forms went to press too early to permit our giving the number of signatures.

IT IS UP TO THE PEOPLE.

Hopkinsville Can Have a $200,000 Cotton Mill If She Will.

7 PER CENT GUARANTEE

An Enterprise That Will Give Employment to 200 People.

What promises to be of supreme importance to the city has manifested itself since our last edition, though without going into details, we could have enlightened our readers in Saturday's edition had we not been under a pledge to "keep dark" until the light was turned on Friday night.

Mr. J. C. Clair, connected with the Illinois Central Railroad system, as stated in our Saturday's issue, was in the city at the request of our most progressive citizens to look over the city and confer with our citizens as to what inducements would be offered the projectors to locate a large cotton mill here.

The Commercial Club, true to the purpose of the organization, was only too glad to make its initial move for the development of Greater Hopkinsville, and in conjunction with the gentlemen who invited Mr. Clair and Mr. H. H. Homer, of Boston, to come here and look over the territory and feel the public pulse, encouraged by the local Elks in allowing the use of their home for the conference, stepped to the front and showed that it is earnest and determined to do what it can in inducing "outsiders" to come here and invest their capital.

Without trying to exploit something that might be without merit, but only to give our people a chance to help themselves, Mr. Clair, who is a logical reasoner and practical business man combined, had a face-to-face talk with the more progressive element of our business men and citizens. He was here for business and was talking to business men. He has no idea of deceiving the unwary or anyone else.

To be brief, the substance of Messrs. Clair and Homer's proposition to our city is this: A cotton mill worth $200,000 or more will be located here if the people will take $80,000 of the capital stock. Eastern capitalists to take the other $120,000. Seven per cent. annual dividend will be guaranteed on the investment. There will be five directors, three to be chosen by the Eastern capitalists and two by the local. This is the offer and simple enough for anyone to understand.

The question has been asked, why will an Eastern company that can guarantee such a dividend want our people to take some of the stock? A very pertinent question, surely. This question has been freely discussed, and we leave our readers to make their own answers. The question has been asked, also, "Why should any company or corporation come here for business without we have something to offer them?" Make your own answer.

Question 3. "Can our people afford to put up $80,000 of their money into the hands of unknown men who will have entire control of it for all time or until it goes into the hands of a receiver?"

Question 4. "Why should not these gentlemen imitate the example of the Imperial Tobacco Co. and plunk up the cash for their industry, and not call on our people for aid?" That question is with our readers.

We do not propose to answer these questions, for we do not intend to influence any one, were it possible, to put his money in anything that might prove to be a sink-hole with out bottom that might go into the hands of a receiver in a few years. We much prefer to tell what "other men say," and when the "I-told-you-so" calls he will have no grievance against us.

Some of our people say that this mill, if secured, will be only one of many other great things we are to have when the street cars are running and the belt-line road is built. It will give employment to 200 white people, whereas every recent improvement has more particularly benefited the colored population and our future increase in population should be white.

Why should men loan their money at 6 per cent. when they are assured if our own people have not the money to start great enterprises, how can they ever get them if they do not offer some other inducement other than exemption from city taxes for five years?

Why should an inland town be selected for Eastern industries when there are so many other towns in the South with both railroads and river to furnish low rates on raw material?

Here are some assertions that have been made:

Hopkinsville's proximity to exhaustless coal fields, with timber of all kinds near at hand, should attract capital.

The I. C. is desirous of taking the city into partnership and will give the cotton mills the lowest freight rate in existence anywhere in the United States.

A reduction in rates for raw material coming in and the product of the mills going out will eventually bring about a reduction in all freight rates.

Of course Hopkinsville and Christian county can no more consume the product of the mills than they can the output of the canning factory, our cigar and tobacco factories, the many things manufactured by the greatest or all our industries the Forbes Manufacturing Co.; the work of the steam laundry is not, by 20 per cent., furnished by the city and county, to say nothing of the trade that comes to our merchants from other towns and counties.

None of the products would be sold here, but would find their way into the large cities along the lines of the I. C., going into the hands of jobbers, then they would be shipped back here to the retailers.

The I. C. wants to haul all the freight it can get from Hopkinsville to any place it may be ordered, then why should it not give low freight rates?

Henderson has a large cotton mill and sells everything it makes, and is now putting in additional machinery, as stock "cannot be bought for love or money." Saturday it was worth $1.40.

Mayfield has a woolen mill, Paducah several large factories—all making money. What does Hopkinsville need more than factories and mills?

What do the farmers raise tobacco for? It is not consumed here, but is sent all over the world.

The cotton mills are gradually being moved from the East to the South on account of strikes and many other troubles, and the owners of the mills want to manufacture cotton fabrics where the raw material is raised or near the fields.

The mills would not only bring in fifty skilled workmen from the East, but would educate in a few years hundreds of our young men in an entirely new business, besides giving employment to hundreds of young women who can not obtain employment in the stores, millinery establishments, offices or any other department of business. Many of them can't marry because their sweethearts are unable to obtain employment remunerative enough to support them. So both young men and maidens are just simply existing.

A certain store about a month ago advertised for 50 lady clerks. Three times that many applied for positions. Whereas if we had factories where women are employed they could find regular employment at far better wages.

There is an old adage that says, "There are always two sides to every question." We have endeavored to give the opinions of men on both sides. While standing pat on our determination not to be the tool of any clique or ring of grafters, but always on the side of the people, we feel constrained to let our readers and their friends decide for themselves as to whether they will encourage the proposed enterprise by taking stock in it, or continue, misadventure like, to longer "wait for something to turn up" before they get into the swim.

OLDEST OF BEAUTY SHOPS

Santa Maria Novella Began to Make Perfumes Over 400 Years Ago in Florence, Italy.

Nearly 400 years ago the convent of Santa Maria Novella, in Florence, began to make perfumes and beauty balms. Its recipes soon became famous throughout the world and the perfume of Santa Maria Novella was acknowledged to be the first and greatest known. The Medici dukes, popes and princes patronized it and endowed it from time to time. Every new director added some recipes to those already in use and his portrait was hung on the walls of the establishment. The last monk director of the establishment was the first to exhibit in foreign exhibitions, gaining medals wherever he went. When he died the nephew who succeeded him gave extraordinary development to the business. Pope Innocent XI, once gave a recipe to cure burns which is still called "Balsam Innocentiano." The catalogue of this old perfumery contains rhubarb elixir and "Regina water," all made from herbs cultivated in the convent gardens. There is also a water to cure toothache, which every dentist should have. Some of the convent waters are used instead of soap to cleanse, soften and whiten the skin. Even the health and beauty of the hair were studied by these old monks, who were doctors, chemists and perfumers combined, and whose study was the perfection and cultivation of human health and beauty. Theorris powder of Santa Maria Novella is considered the finest in the world. It is made from the plant grown in the convent gardens and is ground in the convent laboratory. It is used to perfume linen, brush the teeth and to apply to the skin after the bath.

There is a quaint shop in Rome where this famous perfumery is still sold. And this and the shop in Florence are the only places where it can be obtained. It took the monks 400 years to become imbued with the necessary commercial spirit to sell their concoctions outside of the convent, no matter how great the demand.

HONOR HEROIC ALPS GUIDE

Aged Man Who Has Saved Scores of Travelers from Death Given
Legion of Honor.

The old hero of the Alps, Leopold Grand, the Alpine guide of the Little St. Bernard, has just been decorated with the order of the Legion of Honor. None deserves the distinction better than he.

Grand lives in a tiny refuge hut on the Little St. Bernard, and has saved the lives of countless travelers who lost their way or were overcome by storms and avalanches while attempting to reach the St. Bernard hospice.

In 1887 Grand saved the lives of five travelers who were lost in a snow hurricane. His reward for this act was a silver medal. In the following year he received the order of merit from the king of Italy for saving the lives of six Italians. In 1889 he rescued, single handed, Mme. de Verrage, a French woman, who had been swept away by an avalanche, and was rewarded by a gift of $5.

Some years later Grand and his son went to the rescue of a detachment of Alpine troops that had been overcome by an avalanche. While toiling at the work of rescue Grand saw his son swept away before his eyes and dashed over a precipice.

The poor old father, recognizing that his son was killed, said a prayer and went on with his work of rescuing the soldiers, and after digging them out of the snow, he carried them one by one on his back to his hut, a distance of nearly a mile. He succeeded in saving the lives of three of these men, and received from the government $20 as his reward.

Again, in 1900, he rescued a party of Alpine troops from death, and not a year has passed without the heroic old man saving one or more travelers at the risk of his life.

Assuredly, a conceived woman is easily convinced that the man who doesn't appreciate her is a woman hater.

Preserving Eggs.

We have read many articles with reference to keeping eggs fresh for a considerable time after they have been laid. The cold-storage warehouse has received its portion of condemnation, yet it serves the purpose very well in keeping eggs from one season to another. The Agricultural College of Germany makes a report from the experiments of Dr. Strauch, who made many experiments in different ways, beginning in July last, and running over to the beginning of spring. Of the eggs that were wrapped in paper and laid away eighty per cent. spoiled; of those kept in salicylic acid and glycerine eighty per cent. spoiled; preserved with salt, packed in bran and painted with a solution of salicylic acid and glycerine seventy per cent. spoiled; of those that were immersed in boiling water from ten to fifteen seconds, one-half spoiled; of those kept in a solution of alum, also in a solution of salicylic acid, one-half spoiled; of those coated with soluble glass or varnished with chromium or ground with bacon, forty per cent. spoiled; of those packed in wood ashes but twenty per cent. spoiled; of those treated with boracic acid and soluble glass and kept in a solution of permanganate of potash, twenty per cent. was lost; those that were coated with vaseline kept good. Those kept in a solution of soluble glass all very good.

All the experiments with the liquid glass has proven very satisfactory in the keeping of eggs. As stated through the columns of this paper before, the only drawback to the solution of soluble glass is the fact that when the eggs are taken from the solution, if not immediately washed perfectly free from the solution in lukewarm water, the solution will dry on the outside of the shell, and when the shell is broken the pieces of fine glass are apt to get mixed with the egg. When this is avoided by careful washing it is a very good medium for preserving eggs.

A Habit to Be Encouraged.

The mother who has acquired the habit of keeping on hand a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, saves herself a great amount of uneasiness and anxiety. Coughs, colds and croup, to which children are susceptible are quickly cured by its use. It counteracts any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia, and if given it soon as first symptoms of croup appear, it will prevent the attack. This remedy contains nothing injurious and mothers give it to little ones with a feeling of perfect security. Sold by: L. L. Elgin and Anderson & Fowler. The Up-to-date druggists at Hopkinsville.

REAL AMERICAN WOMAN.

Celebrated German Finds Raw London
in Our Cities, But Unearths New Things in Country.

She lives in a small town in the middle west. Strange to say, the highest praise that I ever heard bestowed on Blind Center came from a foreigner, a celebrated German architect, who had designed a soldier's monument for one of our western capitals, and expressed our patriotic ideals for us in public works in several cities, says Elizabeth O. Cuddy, in Public Opinion. "When I first went to your country," he said, "I visited only the cities, and there I looked in vain for anything peculiarly American, distinctly democratic, in your social life. I saw only a new version of London, Paris or Berlin, a raw reproduction of the social order of the old world. But when I became acquainted with some of your little towns, there I found a phase of life quite unlike anything we know in Europe, quite superior to any social organism we have yet developed. There your people seemed really to believe that men are created free and equal. The same privileges and opportunities were enjoyed by all. Men of all occupations and professions met on the same social footing. I have seen one of your senators walking along the street in friendly conversation with the man who made his clothes (the architect had no nose for political mice). I have been entertained by ladies who did their own work without fear of losing caste, who discussed art and foreign politics with me without suggesting the blue stocking or the new woman. These communities were often centers of culture and education; each shared his best with his fellow; and all seemed united in the bond of mutual improvement.

"An Englishman once gave me his opinion that town life was the most satisfactory mode of living in America. 'There is too much hurry and worry in your cities,' he said, 'too much hard work and too great isolation on your farms. Only the very rich among you can really enjoy either city life or country life. For the man of moderate means the small town offers the greatest advantages.' A distinguished French woman who had been the guest of one of the professors of an Illinois college wrote in her published impressions of America: 'I found a real Utopia, a woman's paradise, a place where living was simple and natural, where no artificial barriers had been erected, where housekeeping was reduced to its simplest terms. My hostess and her three daughters did most of the work of the house; the one who served us gracefully at the table played the piano with more than an amateur's skill; another chatted fluently to me in French while she made my bed; all three were students in the university from which their father and mother had graduated in the same class.'

BEETLE WHICH HAS A GUN

Little Insect Fires Off Puff After Puff at Intruders and Beats Hasty Retreat Under Its Cover.

"I want you," said an instructor at the University of Pennsylvania, "to see my new beetle. He fires off a gun."

"A trained beetle, eh?"

"No, indeed. This beetle has a natural gun, and fires it of his own accord. There is no training. Watch."

The beetle was a burnished blue, with a red head and red legs. He lay hidden under a stone in his box. The instructor advanced his finger slowly; the beetle waited, watchful and intrepid; the finger almost touched the insect, and then—puff, a cloud of blue smoke shot out, and under cover of this smoke the beetle beat a rapid retreat.

"Isn't that marvelous?" the instructor said. "And the little rascal can emit puff and puff—can fire gun after gun—19 or 20 to the minute. No wonder he is called the bombardier, is it?"

"This bombardier beetle is rare. He has in his body certain glands secreting a liquid, which, on contact with the air, has the curious property of turning into a smoky vapor."

"The vapor is his defense against bigger beetles. Hidden under it, he seeks a new retreat."

KEEP THEM LONGER.

Apropos of the editorial opinion expressed in the Gleaner nearly two years ago and recently reproduced that the people of the Second district have been making a serious mistake in limiting the period of service of their congressmen to two or even three terms, the comment of "Savoyard," the well-known Washington correspondent, in a recent issue of the Washington Post, in reviewing the long career of Congressman Bankhead, of Alabama, is timely, and coincides with the views expressed by the Gleaner.

"Savoyard" mentions the fact, which is well-known to all in the least conversant with such matters, that new members have no chance for assignment on any of the important committees where the real work of congress is practically accomplished, and he also mentions the vast service Mr. Bankhead has been able to render his district and section by reason of the fact that he is a member of the rivers and harbors committee and the committee on public buildings and grounds. He says: "It is a curious thing that constituencies pay so little attention to the advantages that come from desirable committee assignments. If they appreciated the real situation it would take forty years for them to make the changes in the membership of the House of Representatives they now make in a few years. And the whole country, as well as the particular district, would be better served."

Is not this sound reasoning? It is not indubitable that it does not commend itself to every thoughtful citizen of the Second district?

The fact is obvious that the members of congress from this district can command no prestige or exert any real power until he has been in congress long enough to have an opportunity to be recognized in the important committee assignments and to become thoroughly familiar with the workings of congress through the committees.

Coming down to a matter seriously affecting this immediate section of the State, the following comment of "Savoyard" applies with peculiar force. He says:

"Mr. Bankhead is on the committee on rivers and harbors. That committee has wasted money in the past; but it has saved ten times what it lost. I give one case: About 30 years ago Hernando De Soto, Money was elected to congress from Mississippi, and he got an appropriation of $10,000 to improve a little creek, a tributary of the Tombigbee. Men laughed and swore they could jump across it. The $10,000 was expended and Money got another and another. When $30,000 had been expended a boat made three trips up the creek and took out 500 bales of cotton each trip. The railroad reduced its rates on cotton from $5 a bale to $1. That county produced 25,000 bales of cotton a year. Thus that community has saved about $100,000 per annum, and that began 22 years ago—all for $30,000."

"I would think that a constituency that has a member on rivers and harbors would hesitate long before it took his seat from him, especially a constituency of a state that is full of rivers; but Kentucky, last year, retired Mr. Kehoe, a member of rivers and harbors, and some years ago she retired Judge Berry, who had been on the committee for years, and had got for Kentucky waters hundreds of thousands of dollars. The state has no representative on the committee this congress, and that notwithstanding Kentucky has more navigable rivers than any other state, when we consider the area of the state."

"Mr. Bankhead is on this committee because of his long service. The Tombigbee river runs through his district, and the improvements made upon it add its tributaries have put millions into the pockets of Alabama planters. North Alabama is going to be the great iron and steel producing section of the union ere the century is half over; but before that transpires the rivers and harbors of Alabama will have to receive the aid that has been given to the rivers of West Pennsylvania and West Virginia. It is fortunate for Alabama that she has a member of the committee on rivers and harbors."

Look at the Second district, which has perhaps the greatest river frontage of any district in the state. With the Ohio river sweeping the borders of Hancock, Davies, Henderson and Union counties and with Green river penetrating the counties of McLean, Hopkins, Webster, Davies and Henderson, representation upon the rivers and harbors committee might mean much to the people of this section. Improvements needed upon these great natural highways of transportation, by which they could be made navigable the year round, would hold in check the tendency of the railroads to exact exorbitant charges from the public and afford real competition in the transportation of our products to market. With the great trend of development in this direction, due to the richness of our section in mineral wealth, it is hard to estimate just what it would be worth if the member of congress from the Second district should be a potent member of this rivers and harbors committee.

In the present member from this district, Mr. Stanley, we have a man of promise. He is in the prime of life, ambitious, able, loyal and true. He has worked his way to the front at the bar at Henderson, which is recognized as one of the strongest in the state. He is recognized at Washington as a man of honesty and solid ability, the material of which useful members of congress are developed.

He is now aspiring to a third term, which will only equal that of one term for our circuit judges and commonwealth attorneys, who are thoroughly familiar with their duties before election. In view of these matters can the people of this district afford to retire Mr. Stanley just at the threshold of a career of usefulness in congress, and send a new and untried man, who will have to spend as much or more time as Mr. Stanley has already been there before he can hope to be as far along the road of congressional knowledge as he?

The people owe nothing to Mr. Stanley. The Gleaner does not argue from that standpoint. But do not the people of this district owe it to themselves to have a member in congress whose position will be more than that of a novelty and is there any prospect at this time of anything better if Stanley should be retired?—Henderson Gleaner.

National Magazine

Judge Tyler's great novel of Southern life "The K. K. K.", is begun in the National Magazine for February. Strong pictures by M. L. Blumenthal illustrate the text.

"Washington and Lincoln," February's famous sons, are studied in the pithy, epigrammatic style of John McGovern, who considers Washington as "The Ancestor," Lincoln as "The Dictator"—papers in which the republic's founder and its saviour reappear among us in their true characters—our greatest heroes physically as well as intellectually.

Other high grade 6 per cent. guaranteed interest preferred stocks and bonds for sale. OSAGE OILS well No. 11, Lease 67, has been brought in during the month as an oil well equal to any in the lease and is now a good producer. Well No. 12, Lease 67, has been drilled and is flowing well. This makes 17 wells independent of No. 13 on lease 67, owned by the four companies, drilled without a single "dry hole."

The four Osage Oil Companies owning the above wells have returned to stock holders during the year in monthly dividends, the sum of $24,000.00, against an actual investment in property and development of approximately $60,000.00, with a handsome surplus yet remaining in their profit fund for extra dividends, subject to the action of the stockholders at their annual meetings to be held in January.

Withdrawal of all stocks: the stock of the four companies have been entirely withdrawn from the market. Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood. It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work. Whenever, when your kidneys are weak, out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected, and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It cures the highest of its wonderful cures the most distressing cases, and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar bottles. You may have a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

ENJOYED IT.

Tabernacle Benefit a Big Success in Every Way.

OLD TIMERS THERE.

Dissatisfaction With Award of Prize By Mr. Starling.

If it is going to happen the Kentuckian tells it. If it has happened, ditto. If it ought to happen, ditto again. We told you in Friday's edition what would occur at the Tabernacle Friday night, but our horoscopic machine got to running too fast on two points and failed to make connection with the mental current and we were unable to learn until too late for connection that what was to be two of the best numbers on the program had to be omitted on account of a throat trouble of a lady participant and the enforced absence of Mr. Fallenstein.

Sometimes we have to be a little "anticipatory," but it is always with some trepidation that we undertake to record as a fact an occurrence that has the semblance of being side-tracked.

But everybody was delighted with the rendering of the program. They certainly had a feast of melody and mirth—so much so that everybody forgot to sing "Auld Lang Syne" before going to their homes.

The Eclipse Orchestra just eclipsed itself in the opening part. Miss Wendensmith, both as a vocalist and reader, won laurels that anyone might glory in. Mrs. Barksdale Hamlett, as usual, delighted her auditors when she sang, "Whisper and I shall hear," as well as in her answer to a hearty encore. Miss Lillian Gary, the violinist of the evening, showed very clearly to what height the educated musician can soar. The above numbers, as well as the two numbers of the Treble Clef Club, in its accustomed pleasing manner, won the applause of a music-loving audience.

The fun of the evening, which was hungered for, was furnished by that always ready improvisator, Mr. James Y. Cabanis, now of Evansville. The laughter valves were fully opened when he first stepped on the stage. He confessed he was greatly embarrassed (as much so as as when he sits down to a good meal in his own home) and said that what he was going to do would be all together impromptu (though he had been sitting up for two or three nights preparing himself). An answer to his first encore called for his third appearance.

The Old Time Fiddlers were on hand and got down to real hard work. Fun! Lots of it. They kept everybody laughing. It was like some of the "tunes" they played—almost without end. When they start they are like a locomotive—can't stop without the breaks being applied. But they are great in their "specialties," and they are many. Mr. Hord looked like he was at a funeral but played like the artist of a country dance, crossed his legs and kept time with both feet. Dr. Bourne had a far-away look on his face and seemed to go off into

The following item is from the Washington letter to Sunday's Courier-Journal:

"A banquet of beauty at the congressional reception at the White House were the six young girls from the Second district of Kentucky, that Hon. and Mrs. A. O. Stanley had as their guests, after a merry dinner at the Riggs, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley and their pretty, school-girl constitutions—the latter at a White House reception for the first time, were a most interesting feature of the affair. The sextette all charmingly arrayed in white, were Miss Brodie, Miss Mitchell, Miss Woodson, of Owensboro; Miss Hart, of Henderson, Miss Ora Baker, of Dixon; Miss Hardwick, of Hopkinsville."

ITCHING PAINFUL SORES ON HANDS

Suffered for a Long Time Without Relief—Had Three Doctors and Derived No Benefit—One Doctor Was Afraid to Touch Them—Soreness Disappeared and Hands Now Smooth After Application of

CUTICURA SOAP AND CUTICURA OINTMENT

"For a long time I suffered with sores on the hands which were itching, painful, and disagreeable. I had three doctors and derived no benefit from any of them. One doctor said he was afraid to touch them, so you must know how bad they were; another said I never could be cured; and the third said the sores were caused by the dipping of my hands in water in the dye-house where I work. I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment and procured some of the Cuticura Soap Ointment. In three days after the application of the Cuticura Ointment my hands began to peel and were better. The sores were smoothed and clean, and I am still working in the dye-house."

"I strongly recommend Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment to anyone with sore hands, and I hope that this letter will be the means of helping other sufferers. Very truly yours, Mrs. A. E. Maurer, 2350 S. State St., Chicago, Ill., July 1, 1905."

Common Colds are the Cause of Many Serious Diseases.

Physicians who have gained a national reputation as analysts of the cause of various diseases, claim that if catching cold could be avoided a long list of dangerous ailments would never be heard of. Every one knows that pneumonia and consumption originate from a cold, and chronic catarrh, bronchitis, and all throat and lung trouble are aggravated and rendered more serious by each fresh attack. Do not risk your life or take any chances when you have a cold. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will cure it before these diseases develop. This remedy contains no opium, morphine or other harmful drug and has thirty years of reputation back of it, gained by its use under every condition. For sale by L. L. Elgin and Anderson & Fowler, The D. D. Date druggists at Hopkinsville.

Fire at Shamokin, Pa., destroyed property worth $180,000.

Itch—Ringworm!

E. T. Lucas, Wingo, Ky., writes, April 25, 1902: "For 10 to 12 years I have been afflicted with a malady known as the 'itch.' The itching has been most unbearable. I had tried for years to find relief, having tried all remedies I could hear of, besides a number of doctors. I wish to state that one single application of Ballard's Snow Liniment cured me completely and permanently. Since then I have used the liniment on two separate occasions for ring worm and it cured completely. 50c and $1.00. Sold by Cook & Higgins.

Two more Russian Chiefs of Police have been murdered.

Lame Back

This ailment is usually caused by rheumatism of the muscles and may be cured by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm two or three times a day and rubbing the parts vigorously at each application. If this does not afford relief, bind on a piece of soft flannel two or three times a day to follow. For sale by L. L. Elgin and Anderson & Fowler, up-to-date druggists at Hopkinsville.

Chas. Smith, millionaire banker, of Philadelphia, is dead.

Health

Means the ability to do a good day's work, without undue fatigue and to find life worth living. You cannot have indigestion or constipation without its upsetting the liver and polluting the blood. Such a condition may be best and quickest relieved by Herbine, the best liver regulator the world has ever known. Mrs. D. W. Smith, writes, April 3, '02: "I use Herbine and find it the best medicine for constipation and regulating the liver I ever used." 50c. Sold by Cook & Higgins.

John A. McCall, the life insurance man, is seriously ill.

A Favorite Remedy for Babies

Its pleasant taste and prompt cures have made Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a favorite with the mothers of small children. It quickly cures their coughs and colds and prevents any danger of pneumonia or other serious consequences. It not only cures cough, but when given as soon as the croupy cough appears will prevent the attack. Sold by L. L. Elgin and Anderson & Fowler, the up-to-date druggists at Hopkinsville.

Fire in New York destroyed property worth $135,000.

Croup

Begins with the symptoms of a common cold; there is chilliness, sneezing, sore throat, hot skin, quick pulse, hoarseness and impeded respiration. Give frequent small doses of Ballard's Snow Liniment (the child will cry for it), and at the first sign of a croupy cough, frequently Ballard's Snow Liniment to the throat.

Mrs. A. V. V. New Castle, Colo., writes, March 19, 1902: "I used Ballard's Snow Liniment a wonderful remedy, and so pleasant to take. Sold by Cook & Higgins.

THE PASSING INDIAN

CAUSES LEADING TO THE EXTINCTION OF THE RACE.

Though a Hardy People They are Living Under the Most Awful Conditions—Reserve—Speed—All Will Be Gone.

Our North American Indians are regarded by scientists as a hardy race. The correctness of this classification seems to be fully sustained by the fact that under the most adverse conditions, the vital statistics of the tribes show comparatively small loss over gain. This loss, however, it may be observed, goes on year after year, and is gradually accomplishing the extinction of families and tribes, and constantly bringing nearer the final inevitable extinction of the race.

To those acquainted with the Indian in his native state, and aware by personal contact of the unfavorable conditions in which he is living, there seems no greater wonder than that the entire race has not long since ceased to exist. "No more rigorous condition tending to undermine health and tax physical strength could be devised than those that commonly prevail among these people.

The nomadic Navajos, occupying the mountain region of Arizona, and living the simple life to which they are necessarily confined, would seem to enjoy the means of perfect physical development and a natural safeguard against the common ills to which poor humanity is heir. But the utter disregard of healthy habits prevailing among them utterly nullifies these advantages.

Usually a considerable number of these people gather about the military stations along the border, where they eke out a miserable existence as scavengers of the shambles and garbage dumps. Among these unwelcome visitors the writer recalls a young Navajo who remained for some months at a frontier military station. During the summer the young Indian slept in the forest adjacent to the station, and in winter upon the flat mud roof of a building occupied by a company of soldiers.

WRAPPED IN A SINGLE BLANKET

diers. Wrapped in a single blanket he lay on the lee side of a great stick chimney, from which he possibly obtained some warmth, and in inclement weather some protection from the rain and the snow. He came down from his aerial couch morning, sometimes wet from the rain or melting snow, and always ailing from the cold. He was a little worse off, however, in these respects, than the great body of his people, among whom the practice was common to sleep wrapped in their robes, without regard to protection from rain or cold, unless some natural provisions were found on the spot.

Unfortunately, the Navajo people furnish no exception to the common practice of self-imposed hardships among all our aboriginal inhabitants.

When Sitting Bull and his Sioux followers camped near Fort Randall, after the Rosebud war, they prepared to protect themselves or their families from the severe weather of a Dakota winter, except the fact that they were the children of the wilderness. Among them one little red-twigged boy used a small dinner plate as his means of rapid transit. Before each descent he was careful to arrange a fold of his blanket upon the plate to serve for a seat. It is not infrequently happened, however, and in such cases he went down with a part of his bare person in contact with the smooth, icy surface of the delectable. But it is needless to multiply illustrations of the tendency of the Indian habit to unhealthy conditions. Such tendency is found, without exception, in every aboriginal community.

AGNOGNITION OF US FACE

YACHT HILDEGARDE TO BECOME RIVER TRADER.

Originally Built and Owned by the Prince of Wales, Now King Edward VII.—Story of Her Romantic Career.

How art the mighty fallen and how hath the glory of the great departed! The famous schooner yacht Hildegarde is to be dismantled and turned into a barge on the Hackensack river, New Jersey. What an ignominious and humiliating end to her brilliant and gay career, for she was built for the prince of Wales, who was King Edward VII.—and carried many a gay party of the prince's friends on many a merry cruise. But that was 20, 30 years ago, and years bring great and startling changes sometimes. But on the stories which the old Hildegarde could tell if only the old mahogany walls of her saloon were not so heavily bedewed with voice and memory.

It was in 1874 that the yacht was launched at Gosport, in Hampshire, England, and she was named in honor of one of the greatest designers in England and China's teak and mahogany were used in her construction, and today she is almost as sound in timber and graceful in outline as the day she was launched. She is 120 feet in length over all and 102 on the load line.

THE FAMOUS YACHT HILDEGARDE.

water line, with a 20-foot beam and a draught of 14 feet.

Those were proud days for the yacht the early days of her career in the fish waters, for the prince was a royal entertainer, and such persons as Lily Laughey and Lady Brooke were among the gay and beautiful guests enjoying the hospitality of the luxuriously appointed boat. It is said that many a jolly game of baccarat was indulged in on most days, and the over the mahogany table which stood in the center of the main saloon there passed many a thousand guinea, the prince being sometimes a winner and then a loser.

In 1877 the prince fitted his yacht for racing and that year won the queen's cup offered by the Royal Yacht Squadron in a race around the Isle of Wight. For the next seven years the prince continued more or less attached to the Hildegarde, and then she was abandoned to a race around the coast of England and other diversions. Until 1887 the Hildegarde remained the property of the prince, and was then sold to George J. Gould, who paid $50,000 less than her original cost, it is said.

The new owner of the Hildegarde brought her to America and for several years she delighted in cruising in her. But when ten years later the ambition for a larger boat, steam propelled, took possession of him, he had the Niagara built, and the poor Hildegarde was sold to Gen. B. M. Whitlock for $28,000.

The latter had been experimenting with auxiliaries for yachts, and he sent his new purchase to Bristol, where he had compound engines fitted and thus equipped she did good service for several years.

The next owner of the boat was Blakeley Hall. He and her in commission for only a short time, although she was in his possession for several years.

Last summer ten bachelor members of the New York yacht club secured possession of the craft and made a sort of bobocho of her for short cruises along the coast.

Such is the history of the Hildegarde, the boat which began her career with the royal family, flying from her masthead and which has had a varied and changeable experience since then, until now she has been purchased by Frank R. Long, a wealthy bridge builder and Jacob L. Swazey, of Hackensack.

Her new owners have had her hauled up the river to Little Ferry, where the dismantling and remodeling is now underway. In overhauling her it is found that she is as staunch a craft as the day she was launched, and she has lots of room for the storing of cargo she will make a good trader.

But there is something pathetic in such an inglorious ending to a career which began so auspiciously 34 years ago. What a descent! Once the pride of a prince, now the enforced servant of a tradesman. Once graced by the presence of fair women and men of noble birth, now the carrier of common freight. But may there be in this comforting thought to the old yacht she begins the new chapter in her eventful career! Once given to the lighter, more frivolous things of life she has now become really useful, and there is here something so really satisfying and uplifting as to realize that one is of some substantial service in this busy, work-a-day world.

TRAPPING BEAVERS

IN COMPANY WITH CROW INDIANS ON MUSSELSHELL.

Down the Big Horn and Over the Yellowstone—Find Stream Traversed by Several Dams—Cheyenne Poachers.

Snow storms had filled the air all day at Fort Custer, and the trappers and hunters who had gathered at the fort to assist in the winter's trapping in the valley of the Big Horn and its tributaries, witnessed with pleasure these skirmishing forces of the coming winter storms of 1870.

As the darkness came on Swift Elk and No Shirt, noted Crow warriors, made their appearance at the Trader's store, on their way to the Musselshell trapping ground, and begged shelter for the night. The trader hastened to express his regrets, but the white hunters, who had preceded them, he explained, had no shelter, and their trappers, and their blankets and equipments.

As the Indians stood irresolutely at the door, a lieutenant approached, and stopping abruptly, asked what was wanted. Swift Elk could speak a few words in "American," and when he again made his way, the white hunter hastened to conduct him to a shed adjoining his house.

On the following day, as the Crows were about to depart for the Musselshell, Swift Elk formally invited the lieutenant to accompany them. It so happened that the officer had just received permission to absent himself for some time from the fort, and he at once gladly accepted the invitation. A few hours later the party set out from the fort, and following down the Big Horn and over the Yellowstone, finally reached the Musselshell. Several days were then spent in examining the small tributaries of the stream, and one was eventually found in a little forest bound valley, traversed by several beaver dams.

For several days thereafter beavers were taken, and then for some time the traps were daily found empty. Eventually No Shirt discovered a strange moccasin track on the bank of the stream, and concealing himself in an adjoining bramble watched the traps throughout the night. Just before dawn he caught a view of a Cheyenne warrior stealthily approaching one of the dams. After removing a beaver from a trap, the thief was about to retire, when the Crow fired at him, inflicting a wound that felled him to the ground. The wounded man, however, sprang to his feet a moment later and quickly disappeared among the trees of the adjoining forest.

The discovery that the traps had been despoiled made it evident to the Crows that a camp of poachers was not far away, and soon after No Shirt had returned he started out with Swift Elk to locate it. Acting upon the theory that the wounded warrior had led his pursuer away from the camp rather than towards it, they began to examine the sheltered valleys in the opposite direction, and eventually stumbled quite unexpectedly late one evening upon the object of their search.

A Cheyenne warrior hailed them as they came into view, and beckoned them to advance. As they came forward another warrior wrapped in a blanket and lying upon the ground, raised himself upon his elbow to look at them, but catching a view of No Shirt instantly lay down again and covered his face with his blanket. The momentary glance, however, that the hunter had obtained of the reclining warrior revealed the poacher who had despoiled his traps. As the Crows were looking about them they discovered a number of beaver skins staked out to dry, and at once claimed them as their stolen property. The Cheyenne protested and called upon the wounded warrior to assist him, stood upon the defensive. A number of shots were then almost immediately exchanged, during which No Shirt was disabled by a wound in the arm. The firing had scarcely begun when two Cheyenne warriors appeared, hurrying to the camp from an adjoining hillside. Then this reinforcement came into view Swift Elk and his companion hastily withdrew and endeavored to escape. Fortunately the night came on almost immediately thereafter.

At an early hour the following morning they reached their camp and at once began preparations for defense against a possible attack. Acting, however, at last upon the advice of the lieutenant, they hastily abandoned the camp and moved down the Musselshell in search of a new location.

THE GERMAN MIDDIES

TRAINING OF THE GERMAN NAVAL CADETS.

Future Commanders of Battleships Receive Thorough Course of Instruction at Marine Academy at Kiel.

The fact that the German empire today ranks as one of the leading naval powers is due in a large measure to the rigid and thorough training which her young naval officers receive. The navy is one of the particular hobbies of the emperor, and he takes great interest in the cadets and all that pertains to their training. The naval academy at Kiel compares most favorably with that at Annapolis or that of any other country, and when the young officers complete their course at the school they are well versed in the art of sea warfare.

The German cadet commences his professional training at a slightly earlier age than do our cadets at Annapolis. The candidates for admission must not be more than 17 years of age and possess certificates of qualification for the upper classes of a royal high school, or pass an examination in equivalent subjects. The examination takes place once a year, during August and September. He must undergo a medical examination to prove his general health, and particularly that his eyesight and hearing are good.

The professional training of the would-be officers begins enviously by the sights and sounds of the great arsenal of their navy; for the marine academy and the naval college are in the same building at Kiel, and under the same roof the older officers are undergoing their preparation for specialties in gunnery, navigation, etc. At the college the cadets undergo a ten months' course before they are sent to sea, and in addition to the professional studies there is a naval staff of not less than four lieutenants, while the president is also an officer of senior rank. Among the subjects which are taught in addition to navigation, seamanship and gunnery are shipbuilding, mechanical engineering, tactics and strategy, and the English and French languages. Of course, all the usual recreations are provided, including gymnastics and fencing.

In the next stage the cadets are sent afloat in the training squadron, for which purpose there are several vessels in commission, and the cruises are generally confined to home waters during the summer and warmer climes in the winter. The presence of the ships of the German training squadron in British ports is frequent; but the Mediterranean and the West Indies are also visited in turn. During this sea-life, while they are still carrying on their studies, the cadets are also being taught seamanship and navigation in a practical manner, while opportunities are also afforded them for putting into practice the foreign languages they have been taught. At varying periods test-examinations are held, and on the return of the cruisers to Germany, provided they satisfy the examiners, cadets receive their first commissions.

Following upon their sea experience they return to the college for another ten months' course, in the higher branches of those subjects which have formed their professional study. The concluding examination takes place in August, and the graduates are now given permission to wear swords, and are enrolled in the seebattalions, where they undergo a further military training, before reaching the grade of lieutenant, corresponding to the sublieutenant of our navy. They have now, of course, become full-blown naval officers, and are ready to undertake their duties at sea, on watch, in the signal, or in commanding a company, until such time as they may be chosen for higher courses in gunnery or torpedo practice.

The young sea officer in Germany has little or nothing behind him. He looks to make the naval history of his country, and with this purpose in view he exhibits a keenness in acquiring the secrets of the seaman's art which may be equaled, but is not excelled by the naval aspirants of any other nation. The result is to be seen in the seaworthiness, the workmanlike appearance, and the general noble and tangy air about the German men of war.

The Hopkinsville Canning Company has filed suit against The Chicago Building and Manufacturing Co., for $1,000 damages. It is stated in the petition that by the terms of the contract with the defendant, the latter guaranteed the capacity of the factory to be 20, to 25,000 cans of corn, tomatoes, fruit and vegetables in ten hours, and that said contract was breached. It is alleged that the machinery, in competent hands, failed to come up to the guaranteed capacity, that it will not exceed 10,000 cans, and by reason of the incapacity of the said plant much of the produce during the season of 1905 spoiled and rotted in the receiving rooms and was a total loss. It is further stated in the petition that the defendant failed and refused to furnish a competent and experienced process man to have charge of the plant's canning business during the season 1905, as agreed.

SEED TIME

The experienced farmer has learned that some grains require far different soil than others; some crops need different handling than others. He knows that a great deal depends upon right planting at the right time, and that the soil must be kept enriched. No use of complaining in summer about a mistake made in the spring. About Our HEAVY TEAM AND FARM HARNESS!

We make a specialty of heavy team and farm harness. We believe it is better value than any other similar harness sold in the State, or for that matter in the country.

We make it ourselves from carefully selected stock; every piece of it is sewed with greatest care. It's the stoutest, best wearing, best working harness of the kind made.

The traveling salesmen tell us we ought to get more money for it, but we're satisfied with the price.
